Pudsey means a lot to me because I love watching on TV a children in need program, and I love seeing all of the children. Maybe some of the kids need help and get a hand better job. I love seeing people trying to make life as easy as possible for all the children in need. Some people donate a bit of money that can help to buy things that the children can have a better life. I love watching on my phone and Pudsey day to school and everyone pays XEIT. I even have my own XEIT health and my own XEIT system. I hope that all of the children in need get a better life. So I give a big thank you up to Pudsey and all the people who donate for the children in need.

When I think about Pudsey day I feel a bit sad because there are lots of children who are struggling with poverty, disability, illness, drugs and trauma. There are children that are hungry in school everyday, and there are children who go home to a cold house every day, and there are children who are scared in their homes every day.

But pudsey day makes me feel glad that our country is making a difference. Across the UK there are millions of people who come together to support Pudsey - from mothers to cake sales, to school events and every year's pudsey can sell.

Finally pudsey day makes me feel so lucky because I am one of those special things some children have to face. Because I am so lucky I think it is my responsibility to do what I can to help children in need.

~~Children in need means some~~ Children in need means children who are in hospital or have to stay at home and they can't go out to see anyone and children who have to be disabled and have disabilities and health problems and need special needs for cancer or have to have operations or get.

Children in need means to me that as a country we all come together to raise as much money as we can to help family and children in need. People raise money by having cake sales and donations, events, buying pudsey, or school sales, raising, having a colour for someone who has needs.

Pudsey means to me that he makes everyone smile on children in need and everyone recognises him because he is big and yellow and he has a scar on his face. On a white eye patch with a big smile on his face to make everyone happy.
